Cancer is the second leading cause of death in civilized nations, and the number one cause of death between the ages of 45 and 75. Furthermore, in spite of decades of research into cancer treatments, cancer rates continue to climb, not decline. Some experts even predict that cancer will eventually overtake heart disease as the leading cause of death.

A diagnosis of cancer usually causes people to experience feelings of fear, anxiety, worry and hopelessness, but it is possible to beat cancer, as many people have done it. The most important thing to understand in combating cancer is that cancer is not just a disease involving cancer cells – it's a metabolic condition, meaning the entire body is out of balance.

Decades ago, Otto Warburg proved that normal cells mutate into cancer cells when deprived of oxygen, and other researchers have also found that there is a strong link between the internal environment of the body and the development of cancer. Yet, modern medicine seems to focus all of their efforts on one goal – killing cancer cells.

This is where herbal remedies (and other natural modalities) can prove to be valuable allies in the battle against cancer. While there are herbs that are cytotoxic, meaning they actually destroy cancer cells, herbs do much more. Nature's remedies can help to detoxify the body, improve oxygen levels in the cells, help prevent toxins from causing cells to mutate, strengthen the body to withstand the side effects of chemotherapy and radiation, and support the body's natural immune responses in destroying cancer cells.

As you may know, this a big topic for me, as I was diagnosed in December 2014 with Breast Cancer. My personal choice was/is to take a natural approach with lifestyle changes, herbs/supplements and prayer. I am very pleased with my choice, as I continue to be in good health and the tumor keeps shrinking.

Whether a person chooses to get conventional cancer treatment or alternative cancer therapy, understanding how herbs can support the body's fight against cancer and making intelligent use of these plant allies can improve chances of survival.

Product Tips

Diodes:

Diodes work by creating a subtle energy field that carries vital information of health and wellness to positively impact and harmonize not only the Human Biofield, but also any damaging and chaotic fields of energy to which you are exposed as a result of manmade electromagnetic fields.

This proprietary subtle field of energy has been formulated using over 230+ resonating frequencies that help bring the human body into a more balanced state of homeostasis on a cellular level. This formula of resonating frequencies is embedded and encoded into each diode product through an advanced electronic encoding system using very specific sound and light waves and nano-crystalline technology. Our products permanently vibrate with this field of information. They harmonize and reformat all harmful, chaotic wireless and electrical offenders into fields of energy that become beneficial to you and your pets; balancing and strengthening your body, mind, and emotions.
